Purpose

The purpose of the Office Working Hours Policy is to establish clear expectations regarding the working schedule of employees within the organization. A structured work schedule helps ensure that employees are available for collaboration, meetings, and project work during designated hours. It also promotes fairness and consistency in how working time is managed across departments.

The company recognizes that maintaining a predictable work schedule allows teams to coordinate activities efficiently and ensures that customers and stakeholders receive timely responses. At the same time, the organization understands the importance of maintaining a healthy work-life balance for employees. Therefore, this policy outlines working hours while allowing reasonable flexibility when required.

The Office Working Hours Policy helps employees understand when they are expected to be available for work and how attendance is monitored. It also helps managers manage workloads effectively and maintain team productivity.

Scope

This policy applies to all full-time and part-time employees working at the organization's offices. Employees who work remotely or follow hybrid work arrangements must also follow the working hours guidelines outlined in this policy unless specific exceptions have been approved by their managers.

Employees working in roles that require shift-based schedules may follow different working hours as defined by their department or employment agreement.

Contract employees, interns, and temporary staff may also be subject to similar working hours depending on the terms of their engagement with the company.

Standard Working Hours

The standard office working hours are 9:00 AM to 6:00 PM, Monday through Friday. Employees are expected to complete eight hours of productive work each day, excluding breaks.

A standard lunch break of one hour is typically observed between 1:00 PM and 2:00 PM, although teams may adjust this slightly depending on operational needs.

Employees should begin their workday on time and remain available during working hours unless they have received prior approval for leave or flexible work arrangements.

Core Collaboration Hours

To ensure that employees can collaborate effectively with colleagues and attend meetings, the company has established core collaboration hours between 10:00 AM and 4:00 PM.

During these hours, employees are expected to be available for meetings, discussions, and team coordination activities. Scheduling meetings outside these hours should be avoided whenever possible unless necessary due to time zone differences or urgent project requirements.

Core collaboration hours help teams work together efficiently and ensure that important discussions include all relevant participants.

Flexible Working Arrangements

The organization recognizes that employees may occasionally require flexible working hours due to personal responsibilities or unexpected situations.

Employees may request flexible working arrangements through their managers. Such arrangements may include:

- Adjusted start and end times
- Temporary schedule changes
- Hybrid or remote work schedules

Managers will review these requests based on team requirements, project deadlines, and operational needs.

Attendance and Time Tracking

Employees are required to record their attendance through the company's designated attendance or time-tracking system. This system helps maintain accurate records of working hours and ensures compliance with company policies.

Employees should ensure that their attendance is recorded correctly each day. Any discrepancies should be reported to the HR department or their manager as soon as possible.

Repeated failure to record attendance accurately may result in administrative action.

Overtime

In certain situations, employees may be required to work beyond their normal working hours to meet project deadlines or address urgent business needs.

Overtime work must be approved by the employee's manager in advance. Employees who work overtime may be eligible for compensation or compensatory time off depending on company policy and local labor regulations.

Employees should not work excessive hours without approval, as maintaining a healthy work-life balance is an important priority for the organization.

Late Arrivals and Early Departures

Employees are expected to arrive at work on time and complete their full working day. Occasional delays due to unavoidable circumstances may occur, but employees should inform their manager as soon as possible if they expect to arrive late.

Frequent late arrivals or early departures may be addressed through discussions with the employee and may result in corrective actions if the issue persists.

Breaks During Work Hours

Employees are encouraged to take short breaks during the workday to maintain focus and productivity. However, these breaks should not significantly interfere with work responsibilities or team collaboration.

Break durations and timing should be reasonable and should not disrupt scheduled meetings or project tasks.

Policy Violations

Failure to comply with the Office Working Hours Policy may result in disciplinary action. Examples of violations include repeated late arrivals, failure to complete required working hours, or misreporting attendance records.

Managers may address such issues through discussions, warnings, or other corrective measures depending on the severity and frequency of the violation.
